

Momo Pixel Bio

Momo Pixel is an award winning Indie Game Developer, Art Director, and Multidisciplinary Artist. Beginning her career copywriting commercials for Nintendo, her best-known work is Hair Nah, a video game about the issues of touching black women's hair. Hair Nah took the internet by storm garnering over 9 billion impressions and establishing Pixel as a force to be reckoned with. Pixel has since created captivating games for major brands such as Google, Google Play, Hulu, and Twitter, and has been featured in numerous publications.

In addition to her game design work, Momo Pixel is an active speaker and advocate for Individuality, diversity, and positive change in the tech industry and her artwork has been showcased in renowned institutions such as the Victoria Albert Museum, MOAD, and MassArt Art Museum

